

Introduction

The gardens behind the stately homes along the Amsterdam canals were used mainly to enjoy in winter time, when the families resided in the city rather than at their summer estates.

Every year Museum van Loon organizes a special weekend, where the Golden Age gardens of the canal houses of private owners as well as public institutions are open for visits.

On this occasion, on 16, 17, and 18 of June 2017, AmsterdamPersonalized organizes a number of exclusive tours that will take you to these beautiful gardens and your guide will tell you about the history of the golden age and the magnificent canal district.

Canal District Gardens

Program:

Golden Age Garden Tour takes about 4 hours and provides you an unique opportunity to stroll along the city's green oases, formal parterres, flowering plants and remarkable garden houses and ornaments; both classical and contemporary gardens will be visited during the tour. Meanwhile your guide will tell about the daily life of the Dutch Golden Age Merchants.

We start the tour in the Canal museum for a visual presentation of the history of the canals, when and how they are build and who lived there. From there we have a stroll to the Museum van Loon that has one of the finest gardens in Amsterdam. There you will get an insight in how the rich merchants of the 17th century lived. This family owned Museum is still very much alive with family members still living on the upper floors of this beautiful canal house.

We continue our tour with a short walk to Museum Cromhout. There we will not only visit their garden, but also meet with Wunderkammer one of the best florists in Amsterdam and proof that the Dutch flower culture is still very much alive.

The tour ends in the middle of Amsterdam, from where you are free to continue your day at your own leisure.
